Chapter 10 | Generations Talk

Key Takeaway

God's plan for your marriage is bigger than just the two of you. The choices you make today can impact generations to come.

Lesson Summary

The legacy you leave is being built right now through the way you love, the choices you make, the values you live, and the prayers you pray. What you model today can bear fruit for generations. Every family has things worth carrying forward and patterns that need to stop. Through God's grace, we can break unhealthy cycles and pass down a spiritual legacy of faith, love, and obedience. No matter how your story began, how you finish matters. A faithful marriage can leave a legacy that outlives you.

Discuss Together

1) What do we want future generations to remember about our marriage?
2) What patterns do we want to stop and what patterns do we want to pass on?
3) What do we need to start doing now to build the legacy we want to leave?

Put into Practice

Choose one legacy habit to begin or strengthen: pray together, speak blessing over your family, share stories of God's faithfulness, or intentionally pass your faith to the next generation.

Live today for a generation yet to come.
